Dear Mrs Ureerat Chareontoh,

THE LEE KUAN YEW SCHOOL OF PUBLIC POLICY – CALL FOR NOMINATIONS FOR MASTER DEGREE PROGRAMMES

I am writing to invite your assistance in disseminating information and nominating promising candidates to enrol in any of the three Master's degree programmes offered by the Lee Kuan Yew School of Public Policy (LKY School). We are confident that the education provided by the LKY School will be deeply rewarding for both the candidates and your institution.

The LKY School is also happy to be your strategic partner in talent management and development. We invite you to pre-select candidates for the nomination. You may send a list of nominees to our admissions office, where an officer will be assigned to work with you on the nominations.

The LKY School has a noble mission: to be a leading global public policy school, with its faculty and alumni shaping thought leadership, improving standards of governance, and transforming lives for a more sustainable world. We can also confidently say that the LKY School is one of the most highly-regarded public policy schools in Asia and the world. We stand out for several reasons:

Academic excellence. The LKY School is part of the National University of Singapore, ranked 8th worldwide (QS World University Rankings 2024). In addition, we are widely recognised as one of the world's top public policy institutions. We are a core member of the Global Public Policy Network which includes the London School of Economics and Political Science, the School of Public Affairs at Sciences Po, and the School of International and Public Affairs (SIPA) at Columbia among others.

A robust and diverse faculty grounds LKYSPP curricula and research endeavours. Over 50 permanent and visiting professors bring an international reputation and academic and policy expertise to the classroom.

Global outlook. We are one of the world's most diverse public policy school. Our graduates come from close to 100 economies. Many have gone on to become ministers, permanent secretaries, members of parliament, social impact entrepreneurs, and heads of Non-Governmental Organisations. Our graduates leave the School with an impressive global network. The benefits of public policy education at LKYSPP are life-long.

Helping shape Asia's Influence in the World. The transformation of Asia has been phenomenal, and its influence on global affairs will change relationships between regions, countries, and states. The need to understand these new relationships and their implications for the global order is all the more important for the policymakers and leaders of tomorrow. LKYSPP offers a unique opportunity to research and analyse these complex developments in a rich interdisciplinary, multicultural setting.

An innovative Asia-focused curriculum for Asia's policymakers. Our curriculum is an innovative blend of Asia-centric case studies, best practices, and developmental stories. Singapore's unique experience forms a cornerstone both for understanding and challenging prevailing theories. The curriculum draws insights from five decades of Singapore's nation-building efforts against a background of Asia's development. At LKYSPP, students get to rehearse real policy cases in the classroom. In an innovative modern pedagogical environment, our students learn from our distinguished faculty and hear diverse perspectives from world-renowned academics and policy practitioners.

LKYSPP offers the following three master programmes conducted in English.

Master Programmes

- One-year Master in Public Administration (MPA): For mid-managerial professionals with at least five years of relevant work experience in a supervisory role, seeking to transition to senior management and leadership functions.
- Two-year Master in Public Policy (MPP): For early-career professionals with at least two years of relevant work experience looking to gain a strong foundation in policy analysis, programme evaluation, and public management.
- Two-year Master in International Affairs (MIA): For professionals with a keen interest in Asian and global affairs and a strong passion for contributing to positive transformations worldwide.

For further details, including application instructions, please visit our website at <http://www.lkyspp.nus.edu.sg/admissions>. Places in the programmes and scholarships are offered on a competitive basis. Please note that the application deadline is 15 December for MIA and MPP programmes, and 31 December 2023 for the MPA programme.

When you have prepared a list of nominees, please send the list to Desmond Seow, Assistant Head of Regions, at Desmond@nus.edu.sg by 15 November 2023. Please do let us know if you require additional time to gather your nominees.

Thank you in advance for your help and support for this important mission to prepare your talented staff for future leadership positions. We are confident that their time with the Lee Kuan Yew School of Public Policy will make a real positive difference when they resume their careers upon graduation.

With best wishes,

Celeste Ho (Ms)

UNRAVEL GLOBAL PERSPECTIVES
IN A FUTURE THAT IS ASIAN

Uncover insights from leading academics and thought leaders and discover how Asia influences global issues. Join them at the forefront of their research, teaching and ideas. See inside.

The Lee Kuan Yew School of Public Policy

Our school is ideally located in one of the best public policy laboratories in the world. The city-state is widely known for its strong governance and effective foreign and domestic policies.

Since 2004, we have welcomed and educated over 24,000 leaders and policymakers. Our dynamic, evolving curriculum has empowered them with the knowledge and skills to solve increasingly complex problems in a world pivoting towards Asia.

A DISTINGUISHED FACULTY TO INSPIRE AND CHALLENGE.

When you study with us you can expect to gain real world insights from our distinguished faculty of scholars and practitioners who are trained in the world's best universities. Our dedicated faculty members bring extensive experience and intellectual candour. They help create a rigorous academic environment and provide unparalleled learning opportunities.

POWERFUL PROFESSIONAL, PERSONAL AND ACADEMIC NETWORKS.

You will join a global network of the world's most talented young leaders and form invaluable professional and personal connections with an alumni network spanning over 100 economies.

You will also benefit from the school's extensive global academic network, which includes strategic partnerships with the prestigious Global Public Policy Network (GPPN), which takes in Columbia University, the London School of Economics & Political Science (LSE) and L'institut d'études politiques de Paris (Sciences Po), among others.

The school is also a member of the Association of Professional School of International Affairs (APSA), which is dedicated to the improvement of professional education in international affairs and the advancement of international understanding, prosperity, peace, and security.

Empowered over 24,000 leaders and policymakers since 2004

WHY STUDY INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS?

The standard of living for millions of people in Asia continues to rise, as do the ambitions of individual countries in the region. This development is delivering economic growth, stability, and security, but it is also driving tension, conflict and uncertainty.

If the rising power, aspiration, and conflict in Asia is not managed well, the regional and international economic and security system will be shaken.

Better domestic governance in Asia is essential. However, it is increasingly difficult to imagine that, without paying serious attention to the relationships between states in Asia, and around the world, particularly the United States, Europe, and the Gulf and Middle East.

The need for knowledgeable, capable leaders with a firm grasp on international affairs in the region and beyond has never been greater.

For years now the world's economic centre has been pulling away from the West. While some might argue who will take America's place as the engine of the world economy, the facts are clear and undisputed. According to the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development, Asia is and will continue to be the world's fastest-growing region, with China and India leading the charge. By 2050, these two countries will become the world's largest economies. The world's economic centre will be in Asia.

A new world order is taking shape, definitely economically but potentially politically as well. However, as standards of living rise so too do expectations and risks. In an attempt to maintain or expand influence, major players are increasing their diplomatic and military activities. The need for well-trained leaders with a solid grounding in international affairs has never been greater. The time for Asia is now. Prepare yourself for that future by enrolling in the school today."

Professor Danny Quah

Dean and Li Ka Shing Professor in Economics,
Lee Kuan Yew School of Public Policy

Public Policy versus International Affairs

Asia's rapid rise has had an enormous effect on domestic public policy within individual states. The inevitable changes to public management and leadership, social policy, and public finance, have forced governments to change the way they make and implement policy.

As a result, public policy training that focuses on managing domestic affairs has, rightly, been given a high-priority.

But the world is changing. Traditional domestic public policy concerns like social movements, democratisation, ethnic and religious extremism, electoral politics, and the role of the media are increasingly being influenced externally by larger regional changes.

In order to understand and effectively manage these changes, a shift in educational emphasis is needed, from purely domestic affairs to the growing impact of regional and global issues. A sound grounding in international affairs is essential.

An MIA at the LKYSPP offers just that, via a comprehensive multidisciplinary curriculum.

The two-year, full-time programme provides a wide range of elective modules (including relevant domains in public policy studies) with ample scope to specialise in areas of interest.

Students enjoy connecting with other students from Singapore, Asia, and the rest of the world through an intense and uniquely immersive experience of fast-developing Asia in its many dimensions and nuances.

Against the backdrop of a rising Asia, being in Singapore gives students at the LKYSPP the perfect vantage point from which to watch the action unfold. A gleaming metropolitan city-state, Singapore is a diverse melting pot of Eastern and Western cultures. This is a globally renowned economic hub where over 7,000 multinational corporations (MNCs) are headquartered.

At the LKYSPP, you will gain access to internships in the public, private and non-profit sectors during school breaks, facilitated by the school's extensive networks across leading think-tanks, consulting firms, and other organisations. Singapore's central location in the heart of Southeast Asia also makes it an ideal base for students to explore and learn about this rapidly-developing region.

All of which makes it an ideal place to study international affairs and take the next step to a successful and influential career.

At the Lee Kuan Yew School of Public Policy, students explore answers to global problems from multiple perspectives, learning not only from the Western, but also from the Asian experience. Students can actually live the growing role of the region on the global stage during their studies.

Course outline and summary of courses

MASTER IN INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS

What can you expect to gain from the MIA programme?

- A working knowledge and deep understanding of issues, theories and debates in international affairs that can help you achieve an exciting career in diplomacy, public and foreign service, business, security, conflict resolution and development.
- A critical awareness of the strengths and limitations of each international affairs subfield, and how to make sense of its complexities.
- How to apply key theories and analytical tools to devise solutions for complex problems
- Cross-cultural and decision-making skills to make practical judgements that are balanced by theoretical, analytical and ethical considerations.
- The confidence to provoke and effect positive transformations in the world, solving problems in ways that are constructive, imaginative, analytically sound, practically feasible and culturally sensible.
- A deep, nuanced understanding of Asia and its place in the world.

The (MIA) programme is intended to equip students with tools of analysis to understand the continuities and upheavals in international affairs and to get them to think not only rigorously but also creatively about the complexities of policy making for a safer and more sustainable world.

Master's Thesis/Capstone Project (based on a two-month Internship)/White Paper

*You may graduate without a specialisation.

CORE COURSES

PP5901

International Relations: Theory and Practice

This course will introduce students to the predominant ways in which scholars of world politics go about making sense of the contemporary world. Three main approaches will be emphasised: realism, liberalism, and constructivism. In particular we will explore theories of the balance of power, the balance of threat, the rise and decline of great powers, hegemony, cooperation theory, the role of international institutions in global governance, and the structures and relations of identity between and among states and societies. Major contemporary issues that will be addressed include the relations among China, Europe, and the United States; the global political economy, including trade and development; and the prospects for global cooperation on issues such as climate change.

PP5913

Comparative Politics

This course introduces students to the foundations of comparative politics, which is the study of the domestic politics that happens within states. From taking this course, students will be able to answer questions such as: what is a state? How do different countries govern? What is the relationship between political institutions, economic development, and governance? How do political institutions change or persist? Why do some states experience conflict and contention among their people? Overall, the course will empower students with theories and frameworks to analyse how different countries around the world work.

Singapore is a terrific place to take the pulse of Asia for those who are interested in interpreting the continent. If you are really interested in Asia, you need to be here in order to analyse it.

Professor Khong Yuen Foong

Li Ka Shing Professor in Political Science and Co-Director, Centre on Asia and Globalisation

Why is Asia the way it is today? What are the forces that shaped it? What are the new drivers that are not rooted in history? What new trends and developments in Asia should analysts look out for? This class provides a historical and contemporary perspective of Asia's position in the world. It engages in debates surrounding Asia from the onset of the Cold War to the present. It discusses how the regional order in Asia came about, and aims to understand how that order is evolving as new dynamics emerge and power shifts occur.

PP5915

International Relations of Asia

PP5904

Research Methods in International Affairs

PP5914

Global Politics and the Economy

This course provides an introduction to contemporary issues in the global political economy. It examines a wide range of topics including trade, foreign investment, finance, and economic development from micro, macro, and institutional perspectives. These topics will also be interrogated in the context of developed and developing countries and in international relations as well as domestic or comparative politics.

To successfully identify and address the critical questions in international affairs, we need tools to advance our own analysis and to critically assess what others propose. This course provides an introduction to the principal research methods in international affairs. You will assess the strengths and weaknesses of alternative approaches, learn how and when to use different lines of attack, and gain experience in critically evaluating published research. By the end of the module, you will have developed a personal toolkit that includes small-N case studies, comparative case studies, process tracing, hypothesis testing, analysis of variance, basic statistical methods (including regression analysis), and discourse analysis.

Students in the MIA programme will learn so much not just from the LKYSPP faculty, but from each other as well. The relationships they form within this community will serve them for the rest of their career.

Assistant Professor
(Presidential Young Professor)
MIA Programme Chair

Double Degree and Exchange Programme:

Qualified students can pursue a Master of Arts in International Economics and Finance double degree with our partner institution, Paul H. Nitze School of Advanced International Studies (SAIS), a graduate school of Johns Hopkins University.

The Master in International Affairs programme provides students with a strong foundation in both theoretical frameworks and policy knowledge in various subfields of international relations, together with an immersive experience in Asia, while the Masters of Arts in International Economics and Finance programme prepares students to understand advanced economic theories, master quantitative and econometric skills, and analyze a wide range of international economics and financial issues.

Admission is highly competitive and accepted students get to spend one year at the LKY School and the second at SAIS. Application to SAIS should be made at the end of the first semester at LKY School. Upon successful completion of the programme, graduates will be awarded with two Master degrees from LKY School and SAIS.

Eligible MIA students can participate in a 1-semester exchange programme with our partner institutions, which include:

GRADUATE FOCUS

I chose to study the MIA at LKYSPP because of the Asia-focussed curriculum.

I chose to study the MIA at LKYSPP because of the Asia-focussed curriculum. I aspire to build on my knowledge of traditional Chinese culture in order to find a particularly Asian path to good governance and policy. The professors are highly regarded and I learned a lot from them. Events such as the Ambassador Circle Series provided me with the opportunity to learn more about the realities of international affairs. Last but not least, the diversity of our MIA class has helped me think from a multifaceted and multicultural perspective. My main takeaway from this programme is that knowledge reshapes destiny, and it's never too late to achieve your goals.

Zheng Weiting
China, MIA class of 2019

I have worked together with people from different countries and diverse backgrounds to create a truly global perspective on international affairs.

The Lee Kuan Yew School of Public Policy was at the top of my list when I was choosing to pursue my masters. During my 2 years at LKYSPP, I have worked together with people from different countries and diverse backgrounds to create a truly global perspective on international affairs. I have done an internship in China, an exchange programme in Kazakhstan, and Singapore is now my 'second home'.

Francesco Brusaporco
Italy, MIA class of 2020

I firmly believe that only when there is clarity of thought on Asian geopolitics can one contribute productively to shaping it.

The MIA programme offered me the chance to study international affairs from a public policy perspective. My experience at the school has reaffirmed my belief that these are complementary attributes essential for unpacking the increasingly complex geopolitics of the world. Another important factor for me choosing this programme was the Asia-focussed nature of its curriculum. I firmly believe that only when there is clarity of thought on Asian geopolitics can one contribute productively to shaping it.

I now have the research and analysis skills I need to effectively interpret the evolving world economic and development landscape. The MIA programme strikes the perfect balance between practical application and theoretical understanding to deliver a well-rounded course perfectly suited to anyone looking to make a difference in the world.

The MPA curriculum comprises core courses and a wide range of elective. Students are required to complete:

- 4 core courses
- 2 elective courses from the Management and Leadership specialisation area
- 4 elective courses

Governance Study Project

A key feature of the MPA Programme is the Governance Study Project (GSP), which aims to expose students to a complex public policy issue of relevance to Asia, and share insights on how local policymakers are addressing this issue through a multi-agency, multi-pronged effort. Learning journeys relevant to the GSP themes are also organised.

In this module, students work together in groups to prepare a policy memo and report under faculty supervision. This applied learning component provides an opportunity for students to reflect on the knowledge and insights gained from the course. They will then share their research findings at a conference at the end of the Semester 2.

Classroom Diversity

The MPA cohort comprises 40 to 60 students from public, private and not-for-profit sectors, from more than 20 countries.

Core Courses

Core courses focus on imparting practical skills, disciplinary knowledge and interdisciplinary competencies that facilitate the work of policy practitioners, researchers, public managers and leaders. They include:

- Economic Analysis
- Policy Analysis
- Public Management
- Governance Study Project

Elective Courses

Those who seek a broader Public Administration education must choose to read any four electives from over 60 courses. Students can choose from a new elective basket 'Evidence-Based Innovation Lab', which includes courses such as:

- Big Data, Official Statistics, and Public Policy
- Data Analytics: Science, Art and Applications

Students are also required to complete 2 elective courses from the Public Management and Leadership specialisation area.

Please visit <https://lkyspp.nus.edu.sg/graduate-programmes/electives> for the full list of electives.

Cross-Faculty Courses

Students may also register for up to 2 elective courses offered in other postgraduate programmes, such as Business Administration, Economics, Political Science and Southeast Asian Studies.

Double Degree

Qualified students can pursue double degrees with the NUS Business School and the NUS Faculty of Law. They include:

- Master in Public Administration and Master of Business Administration (MPA-MBA)
- Master in Public Administration and Master of Laws (MPA-LLM)

Policy Analysis Exercise

The LKYSPP Policy Analysis Exercise (PAE) is designed to engage second-year Master in Public Policy (MPP) students in a supervised project with clients from the public, private or people sectors. The PAE presents an opportunity for students to apply the knowledge and tools acquired through the MPP programme to real-world policy issues, while also adding value to the client organisations by generating fresh perspectives and actionable insights. Students work in small groups with a Faculty Advisor (FA) and a client to identify a policy problem, prepare a project work plan, conduct research (including fieldwork, where relevant), and prepare a final project report that is both relevant to the client and consistent with LKYSPP's high academic standards. The PAE culminates with a conference where the student groups present their findings and recommendations to the client.

Internships

Students are encouraged to pursue internships in the public, private or non-profit sector. We actively engage leading think-tanks, consulting firms, multilateral institutions and non-profit organisations to facilitate internships. Internship opportunities are posted regularly throughout the year on the LKYSPP Career Portal, and students may work part-time up to 16 hours a week during a semester, or full-time during the official National University of Singapore (NUS) vacation periods.
